European researchers of the past century have built upon early understanding that blood is not sterile, and microorganisms that are always present in the milieu can demonstrate transfiguration and change of symbiotic and pathological behaviors as their environment changes. Biological Medicine embraces this message as a core principle - the body is a biosphere of dynamic processes influenced by internal and external environmental factors. This idea is not new for most naturopathic and integrated health care practitioners.

Dr. Dhanani and Lesia will discuss the underlying principles of Biological Medicine and the Pleo-Sanum toolbox used in hundreds of clinical practices. Pleo-Sanum has been in use in European practices for over 60 years and has been available in North America for 20 years. This line is the original system of products by SANUM-Kehlbeck GmbH, in Hoya, Germany.
